Mitsubishi,Outlander,Notebook,Mitsubishi. easyusetoolÂ .Issue Archive As reported in the news earlier this week, the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) is continuing its work to develop an electric vehicle (EV) classification system—as part of DOE’s National Energy Technology Laboratory (NETL). The new system will be used to classify the energy and performance characteristics of electric vehicles to meet evolving government and stakeholder requirements. The pending rules allow the agency to classify electric vehicles based on how they are powered—by batteries, hybrids, or other technologies. “Currently, the definition of the vehicle—whether electric or plug-in hybrid—is based on the technology that powers the vehicle,” said Timothy Hunt, NETL’s team leader for electric vehicle performance and testing. “This is a mistake because it creates a disconnect between the vehicle definition and its energy and performance characteristics. Under the pending rule, the definition of an electric vehicle will remain the same, regardless of the technology powering it—i.e., battery, plug-in hybrid, or other.” The DOE will finalize the new regulations in summer 2011. The regulations would apply to future electric vehicle prototypes as well as for all existing, or older-generation electric vehicles, such as the Nissan LEAF, Toyota Prius plug-in, and the Chevrolet Volt. The new regulations will be phased in over time. At this point, all existing electric vehicles would continue to be classified as battery powered, but a new classification scheme would be introduced for new electric vehicle technologies. “The difference between those technologies is important because existing vehicles can drive further,” said Hunt.

windows 10, easyusetool frontend 0.5.1.4, windows 10, yep it was working before, now when i switch it on it doesn't even take my password, i press it in and it does nothing, i try and boot up and it just waits for a load screen to start up, then it just goes black (no error in windows), no shortcuts for reinstall etc. Easyusetool Frontend
