the tear on the screen. - You can see your character's movement direction with white arrows at the top of the screen.- If a tear hits a large obstacle, you will be stuck in the position where your character touches the screen. The tear must be performed in order from beginning to end. In the order of the 'steps,' the character you touch must follow the exact order of action. It can be difficult to perform such an act with just a single tear, so the following measures are taken to ease the performance. - The path of the tear can be made long and narrow by repeatedly tapping the screen. - Each tear can be made multiple times by tapping the screen with your finger.- After performing each tear, you can easily control your character again by tapping the screen. Difficulty level. The difficulty levels are 'Easy,' 'Normal,' and 'Difficult.' 'Easy' Level The song used in the tutorial will be played each time you enter the 'Easy' difficulty. ## What's new:

q Eirāq ( ; ), historically known by many other names including Atrad ( ), Jazīrat al-Masmūḳah, Gergesh ( ), and Teirāq, is an oasis city in northwestern Syria located in the Iraqi-Syrian border region. Its population is around 127,095. Eirāq is the northernmost city in the Nineveh Governorate, and it is the second-largest city in the region. It is a member of the "Top 100 Global Cities" project (2003), and was Syria's best-preserved Crusader castle, Fort Rauf, from 1998 to 2003. In the 2010 and 2013 censuses, Eirāq was the most populous city in the governorate, which has about 78% of the population of the governorate. Eirāq is best known for its mosaic tiles (or Geitaneh اجيٲنه, lit. "smoking grill"), made from khayal stock, glass, and red vermilion, popular in Jordan, Iraq and Syria, as well as in several other Arab countries. It is also an ancient Arab trading and religious centre with strong Sufi presence, particularly in the nearby Dumat al-Jandal monastery. The Herkaim Fara'a Misericordia Christian Quarter ( or Al-Arj or 'Ārat al-Arḩā) is located there and has a number of fine Roman mosaics including a purported Saint Peter. In 2010, the Fara'a quarter was inscribed in the UNESCO World Heritage List as the Islamic Palaces of the Syrian Desert. Eirāq's three thousand-year-old tiles have historically been exported to the Islamic world, known as the Terbat al-Khayal, and was also commonly exported to other countries. The production process required 24 grams of khayal glass and 16 grams red vermilion. Metropolitan Syria still has some of the largest commercial tile factories, including a notable tile factory in Aleppo with seven thousand square metres. During the 1980s, Eirāq still held nearly 90% of the market, and by the late 1990s, it held more than 70% of the country's market. Eirāq has an ancient history and was mentioned by Eratosthenes. It was one of the first Sufi centers in northern Syria and is still inhabited by a diverse Sufi community
