Microsoft fixed it right quick, you have to be logged in to access it, it should be in the description, but once you get it. It works great. problems getting it on a test disk - unzipped files not recognized? I too got this same problem, I got it by accident when I unpacked it wrong.. What I did was: 1) Go to where you downloaded it 2) Go to "documents" and look for "FABFILTER_PROQ2_LM.ZIP"

3) Right click and Choose "Extract Here" 4) Unzip it to "C:" I looked for a folder called "FabFilter" from tiger you still need the 'patch' which I don't know where to find since i see nothing about it on the web, there is a way on the tinker website.. then download the windows edition of smartview, that should work just fine. Â¿Â¿ and remember to have smartview-license.txt and this file safe to delete.. The license and crack files do not work in this case. This is the problem I was having. In the software the license file was not found. I downloaded the trial license which came on the CD and tried to crack it. On the software screen it was stating that it was not valid. The front cover image came from a photo my husband took of me holding a sign for Heart Riches (the logo of the American Heart Association), sitting on the parade route during March for Women's Lives at the annual Chicago Women's Show in 2016.
